

Participation Policy

At Study Right we believe that actively promoting the participation of children in the decision-making process creates a sense of partnership and benefits everyone at the Study Right: children, staff and parents. We therefore involve the children whenever decisions are made that affect them.

We follow the principles set out in Articles 12 and 13 of the United Nations Convention on the Rights of the Child which state that:

- A child's opinion should be taken into account in anything that affects them.
- Children should have information disseminated in a way that enables them to make choices and decisions.

Involving and consulting children helps them to develop new skills such as negotiation, sharing, and understanding the perspectives of others. It helps them to understand how decisions are made, and shows them that their opinions are important. At Study Right we actively consult the children and encourage them to participate in making decisions through:

- Asking questions and paying full attention to the child's response, listening to what they are saying verbally (or through use of visual aids) and also observing their body language
- Group discussions
- Regular questionnaires and gathering other feedback on activities
- Noticeboards
- Regular meetings, between children and staff

The age and maturity of each child, together with the type of the decision being made, determine the extent and nature of their involvement, however, the basic assumption is always that children will be involved.

We make sure that we act on any consultation with the children so that they can see that their input has had visible outcomes. If children suspect that the consultation is just window-dressing they will disengage from the process.

At Study Right the children have the opportunity to participate and make decisions on a day-to-day basis, including, but not limited to:

- Using our resource to improve their learning
- Suggestions to request new resources, activities or other changes
- Conducting risk assessments

[Written in accordance with the Learning and Development Requirements [1.8]]